

BE A LEADER AMONG TEACHERS

Leading from the classroom

Professional learning for educators

Are you a teacher looking to expand your leadership ability? This program is ideal for teachers leading professional learning or who have been identified as instructional leaders, and those eager to develop or expand their leadership skills. Participants must currently be a school-based educator and have prior experience with collaborative inquiry.

This program is also perfect for schools that want to transform their professional learning so it promotes success for all. It will help ensure effective implementation of the college and career standards and is a great use of Title II funds.

The Leading from the Classroom program will help educators develop knowledge and skills for:

- Designing collaborative job-embedded professional learning that is aligned with industry standards and linked to school and district goals.
- Facilitating collaborative job-embedded professional learning that supports educator development and student learning.
- Assessing the impact of job-embedded professional learning to promote changes that improves student results

Principals are encouraged to attend with teams of teachers from their school.

Program Details – Starts October 2015

This program runs from October–April and combines three Saturday seminars (Oct. 3, Nov. 7, and April 23), four online learning sessions (Dec. 10, Feb. 11, March 10 and April 14) and coaching as needed. Participants will also receive exclusive access to professional resources.

Saturday seminars will be held EMU–Livonia; located at 38777 Six Mile Road, Livonia, Mich.

Program Fee

$750 SCECHs

Registration includes a one-year learning forward membership.

Standard tuition and fees apply for those wishing to earn graduate credit for this program. Pay for three educators and you will receive the tuition for a fourth at no charge.

Register at emich.edu/learningforward

For more information

Amy Colton, Ph.D.
Learning Forward Michigan
learningforwardmichigan@gmail.com

Wendy Burke, Ph.D.
Eastern Michigan University
wburke1@emich.edu