

About the Standards Assessment Inventory (SAI)

Learning Forward's Standard Assessment Inventory (SAI) is a 50-item survey that measures the alignment of a school's professional learning to the Standards for Professional Learning. The SAI also measures teachers' perceptions to provide important data on the quality of professional learning.

The Standards Assessment Inventory:

- Provides information on teachers' perceptions of professional learning.
- Reveals the degree of success or challenges with current professional learning practices.
- Elicits collegial conversations among teachers and administrators about professional learning that produces student results.
- Connects the vision for professional learning to planning and implementation.
- Provides data on the quality of professional learning as defined by the Standards for Professional Learning, the system's alignment to the Standards, and the relationship to improvements in educator effectiveness and student achievement.
- Helps schools focus on actions that contribute to the design, delivery, and implementation of professional learning.
- Includes data interpretation support.
